FAQ Title: Category Changes (Spring 2025)

GunBroker.com is making important updates to our category structure to enhance the buyer experience and improve discoverability of your listings.

What's Changing?

To streamline navigation and better reflect how users search, we're making the following updates:

- New categories added for improved specificity and organization
- Renamed categories to use more intuitive and consistent terminology
- Combined and consolidated categories to reduce redundancy

Spotlight on New Categories

We've introduced a variety of new categories across multiple product areas—from Rimfire Ammo and Revolver Parts Kits, to Glock, HK, and TC Contender Parts Kits, Services which includes Firearms Training & Classes, Shooting Range & Events, and more. If you offer niche or specialty items, be sure to explore the new categories that may better represent your listings.

What This Means for You

You need to adjust your listings to reflect new and removed categories

- For categories that are going to be removed in the chart below, GunBroker will recategorize live listing to the new category number. See those in in the chart below.
- New listings (including relists) must specify these new category IDs.
- Links in your external marketing that use renamed categories in the URL may need to be updated.

We've prepared a detailed summary of all category changes for your reference in the table below.

This table below outlines the affected categories. To see a comprehensive list of all categories in context, see https://www.gunbroker.com/categories
